Evidentiary Hearing Requested

FIRST AMENDED PETITION IN SUPPORT OF 2254 PETITION FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS OF DERRICK L. JOHNSON

Petitioner, Derrick L. Johnson, Pro Se avers as follows:

I. PARTIES

1. Derrick L. Johnson, Petitioner herein, is confined at the Delaware Correctional Center, near Smyrna, Delaware. The Grand Jury indicted Derrick L. Johnson in July, 1983, charging him with First Degree Murder, First Degree Conspiracy and Possession of a Deadly Weapon During The Commission of a Felony; Super. Ct. ID 83004982. Petitioner (hereafter Johnson) entered into a plea offer made by the State to Second Degree Murder (Del. Code Ann. Tit. 11, Section 635 (Repl. 1979)), and he was sentenced to life imprisonment with the possibility of parole.
2. Respondent Thomas Carroll is the Warden of the Delaware Correctional Center, near Smyrna, Delaware.
3. Carl Danberg is the Attorney General of the State of Delaware.

II. JURISDICTION

4. The United States District Court has jurisdiction over this petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Section 2254 and 1331. Petitioner is in custody pursuant to a judgment of a Delaware State Court, and seeks relief on the ground that his imprisonment and sentence are in violation of his rights under the United States Constitution.

III. VENUE

5. Venue is proper in the United States District Court for the District of Delaware because Johnson's conviction was obtained in the New Castle County Superior Court in Wilmington, Delaware. See 28 U.S.C. Section 2241(d).

IV. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

6. The Grand Jury indicted Derrick L. Johnson in July of 1983, charging him with First Degree Murder, First Degree Conspiracy and Possession of a Deadly Weapon During the Commission of a Felony. Super. Ct. ID 83004982.
7. The State offered Johnson a plea agreement in June of 1984 to Second Degree Murder (Del. Code Ann. Tit. 11, Section 635 (Repl. 1979)) and he was sentenced to life imprisonment with the possibility of parole.
8. In August of 2005, Johnson moved to correct his sentence in the New Castle County Superior Court for the State of Delaware pursuant to Superior Court Criminal Rule 35(a) based upon violation of his rights under State Law and the United States Constitution. The New Castle County Superior Court summarily denied the Motion without holding an Evidentiary Hearing.

9. Johnson appealed the summary dismissal of his Rule 35(a) Motion to Correct Sentence to the Supreme Court of the State of Delaware.
10. On post conviction appeal, the Respondents alleged that the Superior Court decision was correct, based upon the withdrawal of the November 2004 decision in Evans v. State by an opinion issued by the Supreme Court of Delaware on April 11, 2005 in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539, 558 (Del. 2005).
11. According to Respondents, under Evans, Johnson's good time credits only applied to his natural life sentence for purposes of accelerating his parole eligibility date; and that Johnson is not eligible for conditional release and must remain incarcerated until his death, unless he is granted parole.
12. By ORDER dated January 24, 2006, the Supreme Court of Delaware affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court based upon its decision in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) (withdrawing its original decision in Evans v. State, 2004 W.L. 2743546 (Del. Nov. 23, 2004)).

V. GROUND FOR RELIEF

Johnson contends that his conviction and sentence is contrary to the Constitution Of the United States for the following reasons:

CLAIM 1

THAT STATE'S APPLICATION OF THE EVANS V. STATE RULING RETROSPECTIVELY TO ENHANCE JOHNSON'S SENTENCE CONSTITUTES AN EX POST FACTO – LIKE
VIOLATION OF DEFENDANT'S FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT
RIGHTS TO DUE PROCESS UNDER THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

13. The Defendant (hereafter Johnson) asserts that the State's retroactive application of the Delaware Supreme Court's decision in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del.

2005) operates as an increase in punishment violating the Ex Post Facto Clause and the Fourteenth Amendment Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution.

14. Simply put, the State's application of Evans v. State, supr., retrospectively to increase his sentence from a maximum 45 year fixed term to an irreducible natural life term of imprisonment constitutes an ex post facto-like violation of Johnson's Fourteenth Amendment rights to Due Process.
15. In June of 1984, Johnson accepted a plea agreement offered by the State to Second Degree Murder and, as punishment, was sentenced to a fixed term of 45 years. See attached Department of Corrections Status Sheet dated 6/19/84. As a result of a Ruling in the Delaware Supreme Court, Evans v. State, supra, the State held that: "Under Evans, Johnson's good time credits only applied to his natural life sentence for purposes of accelerating his parole eligibility date. Accordingly, Johnson is not eligible for conditional release and must remain incarcerated until his death, unless he is granted parole" Evans, 872 A.2d at 558. See State's Motion to Affirm, Appeal No. 503, 2005.
16. Initially, on August 5, 2005 Johnson filed a Motion for Correction of Sentence pursuant to Superior Court Criminal Rule 35(a), relying on Crosby v. State, 824 A.2d 894 (Del. 2003); Evans v. State, No. 67, 2004 (Del. Supr. November 23, 2004) (Opinion Withdrawn) 2004, WL2743546 at 1.; and State Law, 11 Del. Code Sections 4346(c); 4348 and 4381. The Superior Court summarily denied the Motion. Subsequently, on ~~Aug. 24, 2006~~, the Delaware Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal of the Superior Court in Appeal No. 503, 2005, on the decision of Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005).
17. Article I, Section 10 of the United States Constitution prohibits a state from enacting any ex post facto law and may not, by its own terms, apply to judicial decisions such as Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005). Nevertheless, judicial decisions such as Evans v. State, above-referenced, may have the effect of ex post facto legislation and thus are found to violate defendant's rights to due process under the Fourteenth Amendment.

18. Johnson thus asserts that the State's retroactive application of Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) to increase his sentence imposed in 1984 from a maximum 45 year fixed term to an irreducible natural life sentence constitutes an ex post facto-like violation of Johnson's Fourteenth Amendment Rights to Due Process under the United States Constitution and constitutes an unforeseeable judicial construction in violation of Johnson's Fourteenth Amendment Rights to Due Process under the United States Constitution.

19. This is so because in Bouie v. City of Columbia, 378 U.S. 347, 12 L.Ed.2d 894, 84 S.Ct. 1697 (1964), the United States Supreme Court held that:

"An unforeseeable judicial enlargement of criminal statute, applied retroactively, operates precisely like an ex post facto law, such as Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution forbids. An ex post facto law has been defined by this Court as one "that makes an action done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal; and punishes such action," or "that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was, when committed." Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. 386, 3 Dall. 386, 390, 1 L.Ed 648 (footnote omitted). If a State legislature is barred by the ex post facto clause from passing such a law, it must follow that a State Supreme Court is barred by the due process clause from achieving precisely the same result by judicial construction." 378 U.S. at 353.

20. By comparison, the due process approach set forth in Bouie, above referenced, was adopted by the Delaware Supreme Court in State v. Dickerson, Del. Supr., 298 A.2d 761 (1973). In Dickerson, the Court held that "Indirectly, via the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, the spirit of the ex post facto guaranty, and the resultant ban against the retrospective increase of punishment for a crime, is made to apply as a prohibition against judicial action having such effect." Id at 768.

21. Johnson further asserts that, applying the due process analysis of Dickerson and Bouie to the facts of this case, he was denied due process by the State's decision to give retrospective effect to Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) to increase his sentence imposed in 1984 from a maximum 45 year fixed term of imprisonment to an irreducible natural life term of imprisonment. In the interest of fundamental fairness, Johnson's so-called natural life sentence must be limited to a fixed term of 45 years under clearly established law.
22. In addition, two inquiries are critical to a determination of a due process violation based on an "Evans, 2005" ex post facto – like judicial ruling: (1) whether the judicial action "aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed", Bouie v. City of Columbia, 378 U.S. 347, 353, 12 L.Ed.2d 894, 84 S.Ct. 1697 (1964) (citing Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. 386, 3 Dall. 386, 390, 1 L.Ed. 648 (1798); and (2) whether the judicial ruling was "unforeseeable." Bowie, supra, at 553. Therefore, it seems clear that a due process violation under Bowie and Dickerson, supra, occurs whether result of a judicial ruling, accord Evans, 2005, enhances the punishment for a previously committed crime, which in Johnson's case occurred in 1984, some twenty-one years prior to the Evans, 2005 decision.
23. As the Supreme Court stated in Bouie, "...if the result...were attained by an exercise of the State's legislative power, the transgression of the 14th Amendment would be obvious" and the violation is none the less clear when the result is accomplished by the State judiciary in the course of construing an otherwise valid...State statute." 378 U.S. at 355 (emphasis added). The Delaware Supreme Court's ruling in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) was unexpected and indefensible such that it afforded the due process principle of fair warning articulated in Bouie and its' progeny. Evans v. State is an exercise of the sort of unfair and arbitrary judicial action against which the due process clause aims to protect. It is a marked and unpredictable departure from prior precedent.

The Court's decision was sparked by a media frenzy and an uproar in the State legislature and by the Attorney General and the Governor, over the concern that a wave of over two-hundred violent criminals would be set loose upon the good people of the State of Delaware, and although it has nothing to do with the rule of law, demonstrates the propensity of mob rule to disregard the liberties enshrined in our most sacred Constitutional documents in the name of "security".

24. Johnson asserts that the Delaware Supreme Court's ruling in Evans v. State, 2005 and it's construction of the statutes at issue, infra, is unexpected and indefensible by reference to the law which had been expressed prior to the conduct in issue, that the judicial construction must not be given retroactive effect. Simply put, the Court's ruling is so clearly at odds with the Statute's plain language and has no support in prior Delaware decisions. As such, Johnson asserts that the Delaware Criminal Code did not give him fair warning at the time of his conduct... that the act for which he now stands convicted and sentenced proscribed a natural life sentence. Due process bars court's from applying a novel construction of a criminal statute to conduct that neither the statute nor any prior judicial decision has fairly disclosed to be within its' scope. The Evans, 2005 ruling constitutes vindictive or arbitrary judicial lawmaking that is unjustified and unpredictably breaks with prior law.
25. The first reference to the law that Johnson cites was made quite clear by the 1964 Delaware General Assembly by Statute included 11 Del. C. Sec. 4346(c) to give defendants a fixed term of 45 years. It would not be possible to serve one third of a life sentence nor could a life sentence be reduced by merit and or good time credits. As the Delaware Supreme Court has held, the 1964 General Assembly clearly intended those defendants sentenced under Section 4346(c) to serve a fixed term of 45 years. Again, on February 15, 1974, ten (10) years later, the Delaware Supreme Court held in Smith v. State, 317 A.2d 20, that "for all purposes, a person sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be considered as having been sentenced to a fixed term of forty-five years." Id at page 5. Then again, on June 19, 1984, Johnson's Department of Correction Sentence Status Report states that Johnson's sentence is computed on a total of 47 years and 6 months. Johnson was serving the remainder of a 2-1/2 year sentence for another offense prior to his plea agreement in June of 1984 to Second Degree Murder, 11 Del. C. Sec. 635.

26. Then in yet another case in 1989, in Brown v. Redman, Mem. Opin., Civil Action No. 89-574, in the United States District Court for the District of Delaware, the Honorable Joseph J. Farnan, Jr., defined the defendant's life sentence to mean a fixed term of 45 years. See also, letter from Public Defender of the State of Delaware dated September 16, 1985 defining life as a 45 year term; see also letter from Superior Court of the State of Delaware dated August 31, 1994 defining life sentence as a 45 year term. Then on June 30, 1990, to be sure, the Delaware General Assembly by amending the Delaware Code implicitly recognized that before the Truth In Sentencing Act of 1989, a life sentence was not for a person's natural life, but rather for a 45-year term.
27. The Delaware Supreme Court's February 3, 2005 ruling in Evans v. State, questioned if the Evans appeal should be controlled by Jackson v. Multi-Purpose Criminal Justice Facility, 700 A.2d 1203 (Del. 1997) or Crosby v. State, 824 A.2d 894 (Del. 2003). The focus in Jackson was inmates serving a parolable life sentence. The issue was, "could" those inmates earn merit good time? The Court held they could not. However, it is clear by statute a prisoner serving a fixed term of 45 years can earn good time and merit good time unless he or she is sentenced under 11 Del. C. Sec. 4214(a) which limits earning time off to merit good time. That question was answered clearly by the Delaware Supreme Court in two en banc decisions. Johnson, by statute, is serving a fixed term of forty-five years. The statute was made law in 1964. In Crosby, 2003 and Evans, 2004 the Delaware Supreme Court held en banc that persons (including Class A Felons) sentenced under Sec. 4346(c) were to serve a fixed term of 45 years. Since Johnson is not serving a life sentence, Jackson, 1997 should have no effect in this case. The Delaware Supreme Court's decision must be controlled by it's holding that a life sentence was to be considered a fixed term of 45 years under Section 4346(c) and subject to conditional release pursuant to Section 4348, 11 Del. Code.

28. Jackson attempted to use Section 4346(c) as a number only to calculate a parole eligibility date and a conditional release date. Jackson argued that he was serving a life sentence. Jackson failed to argue Section 4346(c) required the Department of Corrections to consider his sentence as a fixed term of forty-five years. In Crosby, the Superior Court held Section 4346(c) required the Department of Corrections to consider Crosby's sentence as a fixed term of 45 years with a right to earn merit good time off the 45-year sentence. The Delaware Supreme Court agreed en banc. Thus, the Court, en banc, once again held that the appellant was in fact serving a fixed term of forty-five years and could receive good time and merit credit good time off his max-out date and be released on conditional release.
29. Johnson's so-called natural life sentence is a fixed term of 45-years. Crosby overruled Jackson. The last sentence of the Delaware Supreme Court's 2003 en banc opinion in Crosby v. State reads as follows:

“The Clerk of this Court is also directed to transmit a copy of this Opinion to the Attorney General, Public Defender and Department of Correction so that any inmate serving a life sentence that is affected by this Opinion can have it calculated on the basis of A fixed term of 45 years with appropriate good time credit.”

Crosby, 824 A.2d at 914. This statement was more than just a reference to inmates serving Section 4214(a) Habitual Offender Life Sentences. The words “any inmate serving a life sentence” clearly include all life sentences. In the Appendix to Crosby Opinion, the Court identified numerous cases with Section 4214(a) sentences, none of which were life sentences. The absence of any 4214(a) life sentences, other than Crosby's, makes clear the Court's reference to “any inmate serving a life sentence” intended to include pre-Truth-In-Sentencing (TIS) sentences for Class A Felonies.

30. The last sentence in Crosby was a reference to all inmates actually “affected” by the Court’s opinion. Prior to the TIS Act, the “Class A” Felonies were First and Second Degree Murder, First Degree Rape (subsequently amended to First Degree Unlawful Sexual Intercourse), First Degree Kidnapping and Attempted Murder. See TIS, 67 Del. Laws c., 130. The statement and the directive to the Court Clerk made in the last sentence of the Crosby Opinion, 824 A.2d at 914, provided a remedy. The directive was a grant of relief to those inmates negatively affected by the Court’s prior precedent in Jackson v. Multi-Purpose Criminal Justice Facility, which was overruled. In Crosby, 2003 the Delaware Supreme Court held, reading see 4346(c) and 4348 in pari materia, Section 4348 incorporates Section 4346(c)’s definition of a life sentence as a fixed term of 45 years. To the extent that Jackson is inconsistent with this opinion, it is overruled. Crosby, 824 A.2d at 899 (enphasis supplied).
31. A judicial decision is overruled “when a later decision, rendered by the same court...expresses a judgment upon the same question of law directly opposite to that which was before given, thereby depriving the earlier opinion of all authority as a precedent.” Black’s Law Dictionary 1105 (6th Ed. 1990). This is exactly what Crosby did; it expressed a judgment on the controlling issue, i.e., whether Delaware’s conditional release statute, 11 Del. C. Section 4348 incorporates the parole statute’s definition of a life term as a fixed term of 45 years, 11 Del. C. Section 4346(c). The decision in Crosby is directly opposite to the decision in Jackson. There is no language in Crosby suggesting that Jackson was overruled solely to the extent necessary to reconcile Jackson with life sentences imposed pursuant to 11 Del. C. Section 4214(a). Such an interpretation is specious. As the Delaware Supreme Court itself stated on November 23, 2004 in it’s original decision in Evans, “there is no principled way to read Crosby as limited to Section 4214(a) life sentences.” Evans v. State, _____ A.2d _____, No. 67, 2004 (Del. November 23, 2004) at p.3.

32. The Delaware Supreme Court’s decision in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005), has abandoned the principle underlying the Court’s opinion in the Evans 2004 ruling by ignoring the clear legislative history of the 1964 statutes at issue here and the logical reasoning upon which the Crosby opinion is based. Therefore, the retroactive application of the Court’s Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) ruling was clearly “unexpected and indefensible” by reference to the law which had been expressed prior to the conduct in issue. In essence, applying Evans, 2005 to Johnson violates the principle of fair warning and hence, must not be given retroactive effect because it was unexpected and indefensible by reference to the law, which had been expressed prior to the conduct in issue.

CLAIM 2

THE STATE’S APPLICATION OF THE EVANS V. STATE RULING TO ELIMINATE JOHNSON’S ACCRUED MERIT AND GOOD TIME CREDITS AND RIGHT TO CONDITIONAL RELEASE WAS UNEXPECTED AND INDEFENSIBLE AND CONSTITUTES AN EX POST FACTO LIKE VIOLATION OF DEFENDANTS FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT RIGHT TO DUE PROCESS OF LAW UNDER THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

33. At the outset, Johnson’s procedural due process rights have been violated in violation of the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution. It is clear by statute a prisoner serving a fixed term of 45 years can earn good time and merit good time unless he or she is sentenced under Section 4214(a) which limits earning time off to merit good time. Thus, Johnson is in fact and law serving a fixed term of 45 years. The issue here concerns 11 Del. C. Sections 4346(c) and 4348 and 4346(a). Section 4346(a) states in pertinent part:

“A person confined to any correctional facility administered by the Department may be released on parole by the Board if he has served 1/3 of the term imposed by the Court, such term to be reduced by such merit and good behavior credits as have been earned, or 120 days, whichever is greater."

It is clear that Section 4346(c) refers to a fixed term of years that can be reduced by merit and good behavior credits, not in conflict, but in support of Section 4346(a). The 1964 General Assembly included Section 4346(c) to give defendants such as Johnson a fixed term of 45 years. It would not be possible to serve 1/3 of a life sentence nor could a life sentence be reduced by merit and good behavior credits. In fact, the Delaware Supreme Court itself has held, the 1964 General Assembly clearly intended those defendants sentenced under Section 4346(c) to serve a fixed term of 45 years.

34. Johnson's Judgment and Sentencing Order and his Department of Correction Status Sheet gave him a parole eligibility date minus good time. The record shows good time removed from the 45 years, prior to calculating his initial parole date. Now after calculating good time off a 45-year sentence as required by law, 11 Del. C. Sec. 4382, the amount of good time off 45 years is 13 and ½ years. That would give Johnson a max-out date after 31 and ½ years. This is not a complicated matter. 11 Del. C. Sec. 4346(c) states, "For all purposes of this section, a person sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be considered as having been sentenced to a fixed term of 45 years." Either the Department of Corrections should consider Johnson's sentence as a fixed term of 45 years, or not; the Statute, Section 4346(c) state's it should.

JUDICIAL EX POST FACTO

35. The United States Constitution, Article I, Section 10, Clause 1, prohibits state and federal legislators from enacting laws that retrospectively punish conduct that was not illegal when committed. The United States Constitution specifically prohibits the government from making retrospective laws or punishments, U.S.

Constitution, Article 1, Sections 9 and 10; Kansas v. Hendricks, 138 L.Ed.2d 501 (1977)(Recent Supreme Court definition of ex post facto); Carmell v. Texas, 146 L.Ed.2d 577 (2000)(Analysis). The State's application of Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) to eliminate Johnson's accrued merit and good time credits and right to conditional release and enhancing his 45-year maximum reducible sentence to an irreducible mandatory or natural life sentence was unexpected and indefensible and constitutes a Judicial Ex Post Facto like violation and a violation of Johnson's Fourteenth Amendment right to due process of law under the United States Constitution. The Supreme Court has held that this also applies to the Courts who often interpret a criminal law in a manner which amounts to ex post facto. Bouie v. City of Columbia, 378 U.S. 347 (1964); see also Rabs v. Washington, 405 U.S. 313 (1972)(overturning conviction because of Washington Supreme Court's broadening sweep of criminal statute).

THE STATE'S APPLICATION OF THE 1990 AMENDMENTS TO THE TRUTH
IN SENTENCING ACT OF 1989 RETRO-SPECTIVELY TO ENHANCE JOHNSON'S FIXED TERM OF FORTY-FIVE YEARS TO NATURAL LIFE IMPRISONMENT VIOLATED
THE EX POST FACTO CLAUSE OF THE
UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION AND ALTERNATIVELY THE DUE PROCESS CLAUSE.

36. An individual (Johnson) imprisoned by the State of Delaware may challenge an enhanced or illegal sentence on ex post facto or alternative due process grounds by bringing an action for correction of sentence under Superior Court Criminal Rule 35(a) at any time in State Court.

37. Prior to 1990, an inmate could obtain early release in two ways: from the Parole Board under 11 Del. C. Section 4346(a) or by conditional release pursuant to Section 4348. Release of an inmate on parole under Section 4346 is a matter of discretion for the Parole Board; Del. Code Ann. Tit. 11 Section 4347(c). Conditional Release under Section 4348 is non-discretionary. If an inmate has accumulated sufficient good behavior credits, he or she must be released from incarceration on his or her short-term release date, i.e., the maximum period of incarceration less accumulated good behavior and merit credits. The Delaware General Assembly has now prospectively abolished parole as a basis for early release. Pursuant to the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989, “”67 Del. Laws, C. 130”, a sentence of Level V incarceration for any crime committed after June 30, 1990 is no longer subject to the parole provisions of Section 4346; see Del. Code Ann. Tit., Sections 4205(j) and 4354. Although the 1989 Truth-In-Sentencing Act completely eliminated parole, that statutory enactment continues to generally permit conditional release for good time credits.
38. The Delaware Supreme Court, as well as the 1964 General Assembly, clearly knew in order for the Department of Correction to comply with 11 Del. C. Section 4346(a), all inmates would have to be serving a fixed term of imprisonment. “Shall” is a mandatory word as it is used in Section 4346(c). The General Assembly’s enactment of Section 4381(a) as part of TIS, which eliminated good time credits and thus eliminated conditional release for life sentences for Class A Felonies, was a reflection of the General Assembly’s interpretation...that prior to the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1990, a life sentence for Class A Felonies was considered to be a term of 45 years under Section 4346(c) and subject to conditional release pursuant to Section 4348. If, before TIS, a life sentence meant natural life, the enactment of Section 4381(a) would have been unnecessary. The Legislature’s intent in enacting Section 4381(a) was to change the existing law. That is, to make it so “a life sentence for Class A Felonies would no longer be considered a term of 45 years but would, in fact, be a natural life sentence.”

39. The Truth-In-Sentencing Act provides that:

“The enactment of Section 4381(a) reflects the General Assembly’s understanding, consistent with the Supreme Court of Delaware’s Opinion in Crosby v. State, 824 A.2d 894 (2003) that prior to the Truth-In-Sentencing Act, a life sentence for Class A Felonies was considered to be a term of 45 years under Section 4346(c) and subject to conditional release for Class A Felonies, the General Assembly intended that a life sentence for Class A Felonies would no longer be consider a term of 45 years but would in fact be a natural life sentence.”

For sure then, all sentences imposed for any offenses other than a life sentence imposed for Class A Felonies may be reduced by earned good time under the provisions of this section and rules and regulations adopted by the Commissioner of Corrections; see Del. Code Ann. Tit. 11, Section 4381(a). Clearly then, this legislative act, 67 Del. Laws, c. 130, effective July 17, 1989, to take effect with respect to all crimes which are committed as of 12:01 am, June 30, 1990 or thereafter, repealed former Section 4381 and added the present Section 4381.

40. The issue relevant to Johnson’s case is that the State’s application of the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989-90 retrospectively to enhance his sentence beyond the original imposed 45-year fixed term of imprisonment and to eliminate his accrued good time credits for the purpose of calculating his conditional release makes more onerous Johnson’s punishment for the crime he committed before the enactment of the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989-90 and violates the Ex Post Facto Clause, Article I, Section 9, Cl.3, Article I, Section 10, Cl. 1 of the United States Constitution which prohibits a state from enacting any ex post facto law, and/or alternatively violates Johnson’s right to due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. The interpretation of the ex post fact clause largely derives from Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. (3 Dall.) 386 (1798). See also, Miller v. Florida, 482 U.S. 423 (1987), and Collins v. Youngblood, 497 U.S. 37 (1990). The clause prohibits inter alia, the retroactive application of a law that “inflicts greater punishment, than the law annexed to the crime, when committed”, Calder, 3 U.S. at 390. See also, Weaver v. Graham, 450 U.S. 24, 31 (1981).

41. In the present case, the State ignores the fact that it has taken good time credits away from Johnson that he had earned. Good time credits already earned are a protected liberty interest because the State has “pre-Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989-90” vested a statutory right to those credits. The Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989-90, namely Section 4381(a) does not overrule or repeal Johnson’s earned merit good time. It is clear by statute, a prisoner serving a fixed term of 45 years can earn good time and merit good time. Thus, Johnson, by statute, is serving a fixed term of forty-five years. The statute was made law in 1964. Under 11 Del. C. Section 4346(c), Johnson was to serve a fixed term of 45 years. Thus, literally, Johnson is not serving a natural life sentence. The Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989-90 must have no effect in Johnson’s case.

42. Johnson argued that Section 4346(c) required the Department of Corrections to consider his sentence as a fixed term of forty-five years with a right to earn merit good time off of the forty-five year sentence and be released on conditional release. Thus, Johnson is in fact and law serving a fixed term of 45 years. It is clear that Section 4346(c) refers to a fixed term of years that can be reduced by merit and good behavior credits, not in conflict, but in support of Section 4346(a). The 1964 (not 1990) Delaware General Assembly included Section 4346(c) to give defendants like Johnson a fixed term of forty-five years. It would not be possible to serve 1/3 of a natural life sentence, nor could a natural life sentence be reduced by merit and good behavior credits. The 1964 General Assembly clearly intended those defendants sentenced under Section 4346(c) to serve a fixed term of 45 years.

43. The State, as well as the 1964 General Assembly, clearly knew in order for the Department of Correction to comply with 11 Del. C. Sec. 4346(a), all inmates would have to be serving a fixed term of imprisonment. “Shall” is a mandatory word as it is used in Section 4346(c). The Department of Correction “did” have Johnson as having been sentenced to a fixed term of 45 years, but failed to have his Status Sheet reflect that he had a max out date less good time and less merit behavior credits as well. See, Johnson’s Status Sheet.

44. In further support of Johnson’s ex post facto claim, the State, by subversive tactics, starting with the Delaware General Assembly’s enactment of an amendment to the State Code (75 Del. Laws c.1 (referred to as House Bill No. 31) purporting to overrule Evans v. State, 2004 WL2743546 (Del. Nov. 23, 2004) which held that 11 Del. C. Section 4348 incorporates Section 4346(c)’s definition of a life sentence as a fixed term of 45 years); the Court however, subsequently withdrew its’ initial decision in Evans v. State by a later en banc opinion decided on April 11, 2005 (see, Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) (withdrawing its’ November 23, 2004 Opinion). The Court first addressed the constitutionality of the legislature’s House Bill No. 31 declaration, finding it unconstitutional and inoperative in it’s entirety; Evans at 552-553. The Court then addressed the issue of whether Evans life sentence was for the term of his natural life (unless parole is granted), or for a fixed term of 45 years; Evans at 558. For the purposes of parole eligibility only, Evans’ sentence is to be computed as a term of 45 years. The Court noted that a life sentence is equivalent to a fixed term of 45 years only for non-violent habitual offenders, under Section 4214(a) of the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989; Evans at 557.

45. Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) constitutes an unforeseeable judicial enlargement of a criminal statute, applied retroactively, which operated precisely like an ex post facto law, such as Art. 1, Sec. 10 of the Constitution forbids. In its' later decision, the Court held that inmates like Johnson who were sentenced to 4346(c) so-called life imprisonment prior to the enactment of the Truth-In-Sentencing statutory scheme were not entitled to conditional release. Thus, following the erroneous decision in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005), the State judiciary in the course of misconstruing legislation from the bench incorporated and retrospectively applied the Truth-In-Sentencing statutory scheme that prospectively eliminated good time credits for inmates serving a life sentence imposed for a Class A Felony. By eliminating such good time credits, the Court has misapplied Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) in determining that the General Assembly intended that a life sentence imposed for Class A Felonies prior to the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989 would no longer be considered a term of 45 years, but rather would be a natural life sentence; see Crosby v. State, 824 A.2d at 900. The General Assembly, by amending the Delaware Code in this manner, implicitly recognized that before the amendments a life sentence was not for a persons' natural life, but rather for a 45-year term. This is where the rubber meets the road and the wrong made right.

46. In addition, the Court's ruling in Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) also retrospectively held that Crosby does not control Evans case, that Jackson v. Multi-Purpose Criminal Justice Facility, Del. Supra, 700 A.2d 1203 (1997) controls Evans' case. The absurdity of the application of Jackson, 1997 to Johnson, 1984 until the Court's decision in Evans, 2005 would be improper and unfair to alter or enlarge Johnson's sentence by canceling earned and accumulated good time credits. Therefore, the application of the 1990 amendment to the Truth-In-Sentencing Act of 1989 statutory scheme retrospectively to enhance Johnson's sentence violates the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution and alternatively, the State's application of Evans, 2005 retrospectively operates as an increase in punishment which violates Johnson's Fourteenth Amendment Right to Due Process. Accordingly, as the Supreme Court of Delaware had not spoken directly on the issue raised in the Truth-In-

Sentencing Act of 1989, or Jackson v. Multi-Purpose Criminal Justice Facility, 700 A.2d 1203 (1997), or Evans v. State, 872 A.2d 539 (Del. 2005) and the 1964 Delaware General Assembly had in making it clear that 11 Del. C. Sec. 4346(c) refers to a fixed term of years that can be reduced by merit and good behavior credits, not in conflict, but in support of Section 4346(a). That the 1964 General Assembly included Section 4346(c) to give defendants a fixed term of 45 years, the 1964 General Assembly statutory scheme above referenced (not TIS, 1989) was the law which was clearly in effect at the time of Johnson's offense.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE
STATE OF DELAWARE

NORMAN A. BARRON
JUDGE

COURTHOUSE
WILMINGTON, DE 19801-3353

Mr. Luther L. Jones

Smyrna, DE 19977

RE: State v. Luther L. Jones
Cr.A. No. 1343, 1970

Dear Mr. Jones:

The Court is in receipt of your letter which was filed with the Prothonotary on August 10, 1994. In your letter, you raise questions about your eligibility for earned good time and early release. As best as the Court can discern, you pleaded guilty to Murder in the second degree on July 29, 1971. On September 24, 1971, you were sentenced to a term of imprisonment for the rest of your natural life commencing on June 10, 1970. Thus, you have already served more than 24 years on this sentence.

I can tell you that at the time you entered your plea, the statute in question read as follows:

§ 572. Murder in the second degree.

Whoever commits the crime of murder, other than murder in the first degree, is guilty of murder in the second degree and of a felony, and shall be imprisoned for life, and may be fined in such amount as the court, in its discretion, may determine.

What is noteworthy, in the Court's view, is that under the old Criminal Code, offenses were not denominated by degree, such as class A or class B. Murder in the second degree was merely denominated as "a felony."

On July 17, 1989, the Governor signed into law 67 Del. Laws, c. 130, to take effect with respect to all crimes committed as of 12:01 a.m., June 30, 1990, or thereafter. (Emphasis added.) One part of this new law which is known as the Truth in Sentencing Act of 1989, is 11 Del. C. § 4381, which at subsection (a) states:

State v. Luther L. Jones
Cr.A. No. 1343, 1970
August 31, 1994

(a) All sentences imposed for any offense other than a life sentence imposed for class A felonies may be reduced by earned good time under the provisions of this section and rules and regulations adopted by the Commissioner of Corrections. (Emphasis added.)

Although other statutes may well be involved, based on the two cited above,¹ I would conclude that you are probably eligible for earned good time credits. But, before you do anything, I would advise you getting together with William Killen, Legal Manager, Public Defender's Office. Show him my letter and ask him to do further research for you. I am sure he would be happy to assist you.

I trust this is helpful. I regret it cannot be more definitive.

Very truly yours,

NAB:pn

¹Another statute under the old Criminal Code, 11 Del.C. § 4346(a), states in pertinent part, that "A person confined . . . may be released on parole by the Board if he has served 1/3 of the term imposed by the Court. . . ." Another statute, 11 Del.C. § 4346(c), states, in pertinent part, that a "person sentenced to imprisonment for life shall be considered as having been sentenced to a fixed term of 45 years." As stated, it appears that you have already served more than 50% of your sentence.

Mr. Charles Duffy

Georgetown, Del. 19947

Dear Charles:

This will confirm what happened on 9/13/85 before Judge Tease with Prosecutor Sandy present. At that time you were sentenced on rape in the first degree.

Prior to sentencing I reviewed my pre-sentence remarks with you.

Prosecutor Sandy said he "prayed" that you would never be released. This seemed to me to be extreme behavior, to say the least.

Judge Tease sentenced you to life defined as 45 years imprisonment. Twenty years of this is mandatory.

I asked Judge Tease to make remarks concerning advisability of your transfer to Pennsylvania but he declined to do so. I did so on your behalf.

Also, I got the prosecutor to state in the record that he had no objection to your going to Pennsylvania.

I hope that the transfer can be worked out so that you can receive therapy from Dr. Canals.

Yours truly,
